Admiralty Digital Sailing Directions (ADSD) provides fast, reliable access to the information mariners need to plan safe, efficient, and compliant voyages.

Built on the content you trust, ADSD delivers a clearer, more intuitive way to work, making key navigational information easier to search, view and use during passage planning.

Coastal and route information, clearly displayed.

The new geo-referenced display brings navigational features and routing information together into view, giving you a clearer spatial understanding at every stage of the route and reducing workload on the bridge.

– Geo-referenced features

All features are geo-referenced and positioned in context, so you understand what matters at each stage of the route.

– Visual display of routes

Indicative routes are clearly mapped, so you can visualise them more explicitly.

– Easy-to-find information

An intuitive interface and search function make key information simpler to find during passage planning.

– Improved imagery

Real-world visuals, including coastal views, landmarks and port features, help you build a detailed understanding of the route and surrounding environment.

Supports efficiency.

Developed with navigating officers worldwide, ADSD reduces planning time while improving greater situational awareness and efficiency on every voyage.

Ready for what's next. Without changing what works.

ADSD is designed to support the future of navigation while maintaining a familiar user experience.
